

People Training Social Enterprise (PTSE) is a new and innovative training organisation providing a wide range of social, emotional and practical workshops in schools, colleges and the wider community. PTSE is a community based project that seeks to engage local people with their communities.

Nnamdi Samuels MSc, has made it his mission to 'crack' one of the toughest groups in society – disadvantaged teens who are disengaged from the system.

Nnamdi is a Psychotherapist who has developed a unique model to actively re-engage teens, raise their aspirations and empower them to fulfil their potential.

PTSE workshops tackle a variety of key topics and issues from identity, self-awareness through to relationships, sexuality and health and well-being through a series of interactive group focussed powerful Psychotherapy and counselling techniques – being piloted in secondary schools in Croydon this September, with a view to being Government funded and rolled out nationally.

Finally, all workshops are supported with the PTSE website www.ptse.co.uk which utilises a range of creative methods to engage, motivate and support participants.

PTSE believe in people – working better – together.
